

Consistency

SCENARIO: Suppose a family has approached you about bringing in a special birthday snack for their four-year-old. They plan to prepare chocolate chip and peanut butter cookies. Your handbook explicitly states that no nut products may be brought into the school because many children are allergic to nuts. The family has checked with the teacher and confirmed that none of the children in the class has a nut allergy. Therefore, they believe an exception can be made in the case of this special occasion.

HOW WOULD YOU HANDLE THIS SCENARIO?

How would you handle the situation had the parent become confrontational?
